Random Acts of Kindness

Matthew Rees, a runner with Swansea Harriers running club made the news this week through his extraordinary act of kindness towards fellow runner David Wyeth of Chorlton Runners. For those of you who have no idea what I'm talking about, a brief summary follows. Both these men were running in the London marathon last weekend. Wyeth was approaching the last 200 meters of the 26.2 mile course and his body was about to give up. His legs went to jelly, he looked lost, he couldn't focus and looked like he was about to collapse. Close behind Rees noticed this and stopped his run (he was on course for a new personal best) to support Wyeth. He propped him up, put his arm around and supported his fellow runner. Rees was determined to get his fellow runner over the line. It was an extraordinary act of kindness towards to a fellow human being. I am sure it is something we would have all done in the circumstances and it became the focus for our assemblies this week. Our theme was random acts of kindness. I shared the stories of other random acts of kindness and highlighted that sometimes your acts of kindness may go unnoticed or you may never meet the person you are being kind too. We finished off our assemblies by asking Connie to share her story. During the Easter holidays Connie had her long hair cut short and donated it to a charity that makes wigs for children who are suffering from cancer. In the process she raised £748 for the Little Princess Trust. Connie may never meet the families she helped, but what an unbelievable kind thing to do. Following this, lots of children shared with me their stories of random acts of kindness. It's been an absolute pleasure hearing all the wonderful stories from the children this week, and I look forward to hearing of many more random acts of kindness.
